Bingo Appy John Mule

$ 9,500

Description

It's Offical Bingo is up for grabs. I've owned him since he was 1 1/2 years old and known him since he was 6 months. I had all intentions of him being my life long trail partner but I just don't trail ride as much as I use to. It's not fair to him because he wants to be someone's best friend. ????This is a nice, healthy and well minded Mule???? Bingo is a big goofy playful guy that has a lot of personality. He is the first to meet you at the gate (he sticks his head over the gate for me to halter him), absolutely loves attention and people. I've sent him off twice for a total of 6 months of training. I've taken him on rides at the river, through water, up and down hills, thick brush, dirt roads and with a group of horses. He does very well, not spooky and easy going. Bingo has been ponied off another horse and beside the side by side for exercise 3/4 days a week. This guy is very playful and goofy. Bingo stands to be saddled, does well for my farrier that has trimmed him since he was 6 months old, takes a bath, he has been clipped but did move around a bit, loads great and lunges nicely. This guy has a lope to die for its very slow and smooth. He has started moving off of leg pressure and neck reining but he isn't a pro yet. Bingo has a decent stop and backs up. He will cross logs, walk over our bridge and I have popped a whip around him. Bingo has been ridden western and english (loves to jump) I think he would excel in this discipline (no he doesn't jump out of my fence) The first trainer I sent him to rode him english some and said he really enjoyed it (even taught a lesson on him). I have just recently started him in driving and he is picking it up very quickly getting better and better each time. He has been hooked to a drag one time. I don't recommend Bingo for a first time mule owner or anyone that doesn't know, have experience or understand a mule. He isn't mean but he is young and will see what he can get away with. I love this mule dearly and will keep him until he finds the perfect home. He has always been sound, no health issues, easy keeper and has never had issues with colic. He will need someone to continue his training and spend time with him something I don't have right now and more than likely never will. This is a really hard decision to make but I have to put what's best for him first. He needs his own person to bond with. I am his person now but he is the type of mule that will bond with someone easily if they spend time with him. He does not care for a dog in his pasture but rides fine with them on the trail. Bingo pastures well with both mares and geldings. Is Not buddy sour or barn sour and has been trailered solo. I would like to keep up with wherever he ends up, at the end of the day when I find him a new home he is no longer mine but I would love to see his progress in his new home if possible. He is up to date on shots, teeth floating, coggins, worming and farrier. PPE welcome at buyers expense Delivery available for a fee Health Certificate will be required to haul to certain states. No holds without a Non- refundable deposit(10%) of the purchase price. Located in Cottageville, SC 8439084919 He is NOT on sale, I have ALOT of time and Money in this mule.
